

The Irish Veterinary Nursing Association

Irish veterinary nurses and student veterinary nurses have been ably represented by the British Veterinary Nursing Association since the 1960s. As the number of practising veterinary nurses, students and registered training practices continue to grow a need for an association completely dedicated to the interests and issues concerning Irish nurses and students are vitally important. The goal of the Irish Veterinary Nursing Association is to promote animal health, care and welfare through the continuing advancement of professional standards of veterinary nursing.
